OWNERS TRY TO SELL ANDROMEDA

The decision of the owners of the dismantled Norwegian bark Andromeda, which is now lying in the Row, not to put her in a seaworthy condition because of the great expense that they would thus have to bear, shows that not only on the Pacific Coast is the sailing ship trade dull, but also pretty well over the whole world. Freight in Europe must be frightfully low or the Andromeda's owners would put her in shape again, for the rule of the Norwegians has always been never to dispose of one of their vessels but to sail them until they sink.

It would cost about $16,000 to put new masts and rigging into the Andromeda here. Prevailing freight rates do not warrant the spending of that amount of money by her owners. For that reason Captain Rotter will now discharge his crew and will stand by the vessel himself until he receives further advice from her owners.

The French bounty carriers, the reason in the South African trade owing to the prevailing of peace and withdrawal of the troops from South Africa, the prolonged drought in Australia which stops the production of wool and the growing of wheat, are only a few of the matters which have caused the shipping rates of all parts of the world to tumble and Norwegian owners feel the effects of poor rates in any portion of the world quickly as they can. They are trading everywhere, one finds them carrying American wheat and canned goods from the South to Europe, lumber to South Africa, cargoes from every part of Europe to South Africa, iron wood from Australia to Cape Colony, and in dozens of other capacities which keep them away from their home ports for years at a stretch.

Another thing that causes the Andromeda to go by the boards is that Norwegian shipowners are loaded up on bark. For years they have been purchasing bark by the dozens from England and other countries and they consequently have too many of this class of vessel on their hands while many of them would like to dispose of their big sailing fleets and invest their money in tramp steamers and it would be hard today to find a Norwegian sailing master whose ambition is not to some day be in command of a steamer.

BURIED HIS FRIEND IN DEEP BLUE SEA

Few sea captains entering this port are better liked than good hearted Captain Ames of the freighter Tampico. But Ames is not himself this time. He is all broken up. In Seattle one of his oldest friends, W. B. Maxwell, a wealthy business man, wished to make the trip to Honolulu with the captain, and so the obliging skipped gave him the feathered and easy job of purser.

All went well for the first five days of the voyage, and Captain Ames enjoyed his friend's company. Then on the evening of the next day Mr. Maxwell fell down the companionway leading from the Captain's office on the bridge to the saloon on the main deck. Mr. Maxwell was not bruised, but despite the most careful treatment that could be given an injured man, he died the next morning.

Then Captain Ames, with tears in his eyes, superintended the work of storing his friend's body away in his canvas coffin. A gale of wind was blowing. Heavy seas were buffeting the vessel, yet it became Ames's sad duty to conduct short funeral services over the remains of his best friend before his body was shot over the rail. It was a strange and impressive scene that no man aboard the Seattle-Honolulu steamer will forget.

Then, his head bowed in grief, Captain Ames had to labor over time in caring for his vessel and her 2,700 tons of cargo as the vessel plunged into heavy seas and a gale that lasted for six days. The Tampico has no bulwarks, only a wire fence around her main deck, and over the main deck tremendous waves swept without hindrance. The men at the wheel had considerable difficulty in steering the monster, and those on duty on deck had to move with the greatest caution lest they should be swept overboard.

The steamer will not go to Kahului this time as there is no cargo there for her. She is discharging at Irmgard wharf.

Kinau May Be Crowded.

Present indications are that the steamer Kinau, which resumes her old run to Hilo and way ports on Tuesday, will take away quite a load of people who have been awaiting her return for some time in order that a trip through the channels will be as pleasant as possible. The vessel is now alongside of her old wharf, and will commence taking in freight today. The old Wilder's schedule will now be established again, the Claudine returning to her old run to Maui ports.

Duke of Fife Coming Here.

The steamer Duke of Fife was expected at the time the Doric left Yokohama, to leave Kobe on November 19th with a general cargo for Honolulu and Tacoma. She will bring 800 tons for this port.

Billie Much Overdue.

The German bark Billie, out 163 days from Hamburg for this port, is now considered considerably overdue.

Kipling's "Evil Eye."

Fishermen in and around Gloucester, Mass., are firmly of the opinion that Rudyard Kipling has "the evil eye." He wrote a book about them some years ago and named twenty fishing boats therein. Everyone of those boats has met with disaster, the last two having foundered in a recent gale. Among English soldiers there are not a few who also think that there is something uncanny about Kipling's eye.

ABRAHAM NO MYTH.

To Demonstrate It, Prof. Hilprecht Shows a Little Cane.

A little canoe tablet was the central point in Dr. Hilprecht's third lecture on the University Babylonian expedition to the Euphrates and Tigris. A photograph of this tablet, 1,800 years old, was shown on the screen, and then the great archaeologist proceeded to demonstrate from it that Abraham, the father of the Christian, Jew and Mohammedan faiths, was not a myth, but a reality, as the Bible teaches.

The tablet was inscribed on both sides and was found in the great temple of Baalrat Nippur. The writing on one side dated back to 2550 B. C. Then came some great calamity and the little tablet was carried by its finder to the city of Suza, and about 1300 B. C. the King of Babylon wrote this inscription on the back of it, presenting it to the chief goddess of Nippur for the preservation of his life.

About a thousand years later, as shown by the raw cuttings, a Parthian jeweler, searching for material, found it and was going to cut it into beads for a necklace when (as centuries before) another calamity fell upon Babylon, and at last, 3000 years later, the Pennsylvania expedition found it and brought it home.

"These tablets," said the lecturer, "tell their story simply and conclusively that no scholar has ever raised a doubt. Abraham, with his family, left the same region, departed from his fatherland, which the Euphrates had turned into a desert and made a camping ground for their armies. The Bible has told this story very briefly. The little stone from Nippur, wandering about for 5000 years, is accepted as a matter of course. The men of whom it speaks have truly lived, but Abraham, of the same time, his history supported by millions over all the world, is just an historical, yet thousands treat him as a myth."

In describing the finding of thousands of tablets in the Temple of Baal the doctor stated that they were discovered at various depths. In fact, the last temple or fortress, 300 B. C. to 250 A. D., was built on the ruins of the older temples, the earliest being of the reign of Sargon, 2300 B. C.—Philadelphia Press.

CARIB CANNIBALS.

A recent Colonial report on the Caribs of Dominica is interesting. Very mysterious is the origin of the fierce savages, now almost extinct, who were in possession of the smaller West Indian islands when the first white man burst "into that silent sea." They showed a distinct Mongolian character, and it would be hard to distinguish a Carib infant from a Chinese child. Some twenty years ago a Chinaman, who had drifted to Dominica, declared the Caribs to be his own people, and married a pure bred Carib woman. The resultant child showed no deviation from the native type. Today they have dropped their man-eating ways; but in the sixteenth century they scoured the Spanish Main in search of human food, and from Porto Rico alone have said to have taken more than five thousand men to be eaten. Though Spaniards, Frenchmen, Dutchmen, negroes, or Arrows, were all meat to them, yet these Caribs seem to have shown preference for certain nationalities. Davis, for instance, in his "History of the Caribb Islands," tells us that "the Caribbians have tested of all the nations that frequented them, and affirm that the French are the most delicate, and the Spaniards are the hardest of digestion." Laborde, also, in one of his jaunts in St. Vincent, appears to have overtaken, on the road, a communicative Carib who was beguiling the tedium of his journey by gnawing at the remains of a boiled human foot. This gentleman only ate Arrows, "Christians," he said, "gave him the belly ache."

BIG TIPS IN ST. PETERSBURG.

Speaking of high prices, Henry Norman's new book on Russia throws some interesting light on what it incidentally costs to visit St. Petersburg. To begin with, he tells us every house and hotel there contains a swarm of servants, and each one expects a tip. "The man who takes your coat and hat at a private house thinks ten cents is little enough, and if you give a dollar or two to the attendant who performs the same modest service at an official residence he is only satisfied. The tips of a wealthy Russian to a waiter at a good restaurant are something enormous. A decent room in a first-class hotel costs about $4 a day, and a closed carriage to take you to dinner, ten minutes drive away, costs $5. A few sheets of note paper in your hotel costs you a shilling, and the cheapest kind of bath $1. Mr. Norman is a great traveler, and it is his testimony that St. Petersburg is far and away the most expensive city in the world."

OLD MEN WORKERS.

Men of thought have always been distinguished for their age. Colon, Sophocles, Pinder, Anacreon, and Xenophon were octogenarians. Kant, Buffon, Goethe, Fontenelle and Newton were over 80. Michael Angelo and Titian were 80 and 90 respectively. Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, lived to be 80. Many men have done excellent work after they have passed 80 years. Lander wrote his "Imaginary Conversations" when 85; Isaac Walton wielded a ready pen at 90. Hahnemann died at 80 and was still working at 91. Michael Angelo was still painting his giant canvases at 89, and Titian at 90 worked with the vigor of his early years. Fontenelle was as light hearted at 95 as at 40, and Newton at 83 worked as hard as he did in middle life. Cornaro was in far better health at 95 than at 30 and as happy as a sandy. At Hanover Dr. Du Bois was still practicing as a physician in 1887 going his daily rounds at the age of 103. William Reynolds Salmon, M. R. C. S., of Conbridge, Glamorganshire, died on March 11, 1897, at the age of 108. At the time of his death he was the oldest known individual of indisputably authenticated age, the oldest physician, the oldest member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England, and the oldest Free Mason in the world.—Chambers's Journal.

PLANTS THAT COUGH.

Man has not a monopoly of coughing. Before there was a vertebrate on the earth, while man was in process of evolution through the vegetable world, plants coughed—that is what botanists call him, while we know him as "the coughing bean"—coughed and blew dust out of his lungs. Recently botanists have been giving special attention to this bean, and tell interesting things about it. It is a native of warm and moist tropical countries, and objects most emphatically to dust. When dust settles on the branching pores in the leaves of the plant and chokes them a gas accumulates inside, and when it gains sufficient pressure there comes an explosion with a sound exactly like coughing and the dust is blown from its lodgment. And, more strange still, the plant gets red in the face through the effort.

WANTED TO SAVE TROUBLE.

A British major was sent some years ago to establish order in a small town in Africa which had been placed temporarily in charge of the local military commandant, a man who had risen rapidly from the position of storekeeper and who, not satisfied with his official elevation, had elevated himself on the day the major arrived by drinking too much. The first act of the major was to place the commandant under lock and key, but the ineptitude managed to burst his bonds and invade the telegraph office, from which place he dispatched this wire to the colonial office: "Chamberlain, London: Man here named Thorold questions my sobriety. Who is Thorold? Wire at once to avert bloodshed."

School teachers and other responsible persons on these islands that have a little spare time can hear of something to their advantage by writing to Geo. Osborne, Pauallo, Hawaii.

IT'S THE TRUTH

Tell a man it's a food and he doesn't want to pay for it. Tell him it's a medicine and he says it doesn't look like it. Then tell him it's both a food and a medicine and he thinks you're playing some game on him.

Yet these are the facts about Scott's Emulsion of pure cod-liver oil. It is the cream of cod-liver oil, the richest and most digestible of foods. The food for weak stomachs. The food for thin bodies and thin blood.

But that's only half the story. Scott's Emulsion is also a good medicine. It gives new life and vigor to the whole system and especially to the lungs.

Scott's Emulsion is sold by all druggists and is made in New York.

THE "SPITE HOUSE" SOLD.

The notorious "spite house" of New York City, 5 feet wide and 102 1/2 long, four stories high—built by Joseph Richardson, a wealthy contractor, because an owner of adjoining property wouldn't pay him his price for it—has just been sold by Miss Bellariffa Grace Richardson, his daughter. Real estate dealers have bought the house, but what they want with it is a puzzle, though they are said to consider it a bargain for any other buyer at $15,000. Fancy what the stairways must be in such a structure. Every piece of furniture had to be designed expressly for its place. Yet the Richardsons dwell in it for high twenty years.

The National Guard target practice shoot will be held on December 3th. It was the intention to have held the shoot yesterday, but owing to the presence of the Oregon and New York in the harbor a few weeks ago the shoot was postponed. The warships were directly in the range of the targets and no practice could be had for fear of injuring some one on board these vessels.
